

FCC website is not accepting public comment.

I am writing to complain that the FCC homepage links (<http://www.fcc.gov/>) to register public comment are not working.

The particular link that is not working is "Filing Public Comments" where it indicates that the public can "Click Here to file a comment... main | alternate" on the lefthand sidebar on the homepage.

Both the main and alternate links connections were refused. It happened with several computers and was tested over a two days time period, May 27 - 28th, 2003.

The time allowed for public comment on a contested issue (Notice of Proposed Rulemaking, MM Docket No. 02-277) is until Friday, May 30. It is important to keep the FCC website functioning to allow the public an opportunity to register their comments. This is particularly vital because the FCC has only held one official meeting on 02-277 open to the public. The ability of the public to offer comments is already compromised without additional barriers at the official website.

Regards,

Elisabeth Gleckler